

Living LGBTI (Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Trans and Intersex) - half day training session.

“Why do I need to know about LGBTI people?”

“How are their needs any different to anyone else?”

“We’re all just people, aren’t we?”

GLHV’s half day training session addresses these and other questions.

The session explores and answers these and other questions by drawing on:

- National data
- Evidence-based research
- Empathy-based exercises
- Videos
- Discussions and case studies

The session is delivered by highly skilled educators with specialist knowledge in this field.

At the completion of this training, participants will:

- Understand what LGBTI means, and the difference between each identity
- Learn the social and cultural impacts on LGBTI people, such as experience of stigma, discrimination, trans-, homo-, and bi- phobia
- Become more familiar with health and wellbeing outcomes of identifying as LGBTI, linked to social, cultural and environmental factors
- Learn practical ways to engage with LGBTI clients and families, how/when to open up conversation and tailor to any specific needs that may arise when delivering services

GLHV is a Victorian Government funded agency based at the Australian Research Centre in Sex, Health and Society (ARCSHS), at La Trobe University.
